

The conglomeration of media companies is disturbing. It centralizes and limits the diversity of viewpoints expressed about actions in our country and around the world. Centralized corporate ownership slants the news to the wishes of the wealthy and reduces in-depth local news coverage that citizens need for informed decision-making and voting.